[For the Dispatch.] Lexington Presbytery.

THIRD DAY. The license of Mr. F. M. Swoope as probationer for the Gospel ministry was withdrawn.

The 21st of April, 1880, was appointed as the time for the next stated meeting of the Presbytery. Rev. Dr. J. L. Kirkpatrick and Rev. D. A. Penick were nominated as commissioners to the next Assembly, and Eiders J. T. L. Preston and D. M. Switzer. Subjects for parts of trial were assigned to W. R. Laird, a candidate under our care, now in Union Seminary; and W. C. Fleming was recommended to the Assembly's Committee on Education for the full amount spring and fall meetings. The subject of domestic missions engaged the attention of the Presbytery the greater part of the day. The reports of the committee and of the missionaries in the respective fields were of an encouraging character, showing that the points already reached are fruitful, and that others are opening up which call for more men and

The preservation of the records of the Presbytery, which was organized in 1786. and then included the whole country extending from the Blue Ridge westward, was | finish. considered at a session held after public worship at night. These records are very important in a historical point of view, and steps were taken to secure a manuscript copy of the whole sixteen volumes, to be preserved in the new library building at Union Theological Seminary. The committee appointed to have this work done will also inquire into the expediency of ing all matters of interest, prepared for publication. A permanent committee on the Sabbath was appointed. LAST DAY. After some routine business a vote of thanks was tendered to the good people of Franklin for the kind and generous manner in which they have entertained the Presbytery. The Presbytery then adjourned to meet in Staunton on the 9th of October to receive Rev. Alexander Sprunt from the Presbytery of Winchester and arrange for his installation as pastor of Augusta church A. H. H. if the way be clear.

A Note to the Dispatch on Danton. The other evening I saw in the State the following words along with others taken from the Norfolk Virginian:

"It was the supreme effort of the communist; it was Marat, Danton, Robespierre, and Denis Kearney concentrated and intensified."

of here. The State ascribes the article to Mr. Tucker, who usually infuses his unequalled clearness of judgment with singular purity of fervor. In this particular case, I wish he had not ranked Danton as he did. Young folks, who have not dipped into many histories, may be misled by this placing Danton on a level apparently with Marat and Robespierre in all things: there is another, if inferior, consideration-I confess I have much love for Danton!

The scientist says we came from apes or something like them. I am very well satisfied. I am indeed highly pleased. To have come from apes is better than to become apes-a custom by no means common. Development is better than degeneration. To be walking up the steps is always better than to be tumbling down them.

Thinkers lose sight of the triple fact that Danton sprung up polluted, that he passed through what would inevitably have sunken lesser men, that he rose to something like grandeur. Such progress is unusual-extraordinary. It attracts our deepest admiration. Nature takes a deity's pleasure and pride sometimes in turning out into life characters, so splendidly dark yet so very aspiring, so full of mighty energies as to enlist our sympathies at the time even on application. that we are startled by many of their deeds. We stand amazed at noble activities, engirdled and opposed by sinister powers.

Only a few are blind enough not to perceive the superiority of a man like Danton over the bestial Marat and the snaky Robespierre. Walter Scott, who is perpetually harping upon Danton's defects, forcibly says: "Marat was a madman raised into consequence only by circumstances,-Robespierre a cold, creeping, calculating hypocrite, whose malignity resembled that of a paltry and second-rate fiend--but Danton was a character for Shakspeare or Schiller to have drawn in all its broad lights and shades."

Carlyle set his burning, penetrating gaze depicted his passions, powers, and aspect. I wish I could quote bim. It is as near truth as can be got. He places him next to Mira- PLETE in every department ever exhibited in this beau, and high over the heads of the rest. Truly Danton possessed the eagle spirit He would swoop to baseness; but he would quality of goods can be bought anywhere. arise haughtily to glorious heights. There was doubtless much craft in bis make-up. He was in the main, however, open and not, for it is a pleasure to us to show our goods. free, careless and strong. He assumed fearless attitudes, and he seemed ever as fearless as his attitude. He was buge and and upheld by vast powers; yet he was not insensible to the softest emotions. Did not the best that were about him ching to him with faith and fondness? Did he not win and wed the sweet, tender, deathless spirit of woman? Would not warm, swift, lustrous, witty Desmoulins bave died for Danton? He was really better at his worst than the others. At his best he was a passionate wrecker of injustice, and it was then that his furlous stirrings and sweeps of rhetoric.
